WARNING	SPEAKING DATES	WILL REOPEN.	SAD DEATH	FRANCHISE SOLD	VACANCY FILLED
If You Would Take a Drink of Water in Public Places You Must Use Your Own Cup. The law abolishing the public drinking cup, enacted at the last session of the legislature, and which became effective the 12th of this month, has been frequently discussed and the Ledger has been asked repeatedly if the law applies to the stores of the state. After investigating we find that it applies to all public places including stores. The full text of the law is as follows: The use of the common drinking cup on railroad trains and in railroad stations, public hotels, boarding houses, restaurants or steamboats, in stores or other publicly frequented places in Kentucky, is hereby prohibited. No person or corporation in charge of the aforesaid places and no person or corporation shall permit on said railroad trains, in railroad stations, public hotels, boarding houses, restaurants, steamboats, stores or any publicly frequented place in Kentucky the use of the drinking cup in common. There must also be posted in a conspicuous place by the individual or corporation, by the drinking water contained in any of the places mentioned in foregoing paragraph, a warning cardboard with the above printed thereon in large letters, so they can be easily read. Any person or corporation violating the provisions of the act shall, upon conviction, be fined in any sum not less than one dollar and not more than ten dollars, and each day's violation of the provisions of this act shall be considered a separate offense, punishable by fine in the amount named above. All laws inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed. The body of H. Davis was brought through Paducah Friday afternoon en route from Nashville to his home in Mayfield. Mr. Davis was the son of Ira Davis and a popular young man of Mayfield. He was taken to a hospital in Nashville for an operation for appendicitis. He was convalescent, but suddenly became critically ill and died. He is survived by his wife. —Paducah Sun.	Hon. John K. Hendrick, Candidate for Democratic Nomination for Congress Will Address Calloway Voters. Hon. John K. Hendrick, of Paducah, and a candidate for the democratic nomination for congress to succeed Ollie M. James, will address the voters of Calloway county in the interest of his candidacy at the following times and places. The voters are urged to come out and hear this well known citizen discuss national questions: Murray, Monday, June 24, at 1:30 o'clock, p. m. Lynn Grove, Tuesday, June 25, at 1 o'clock. Coldwater, same date at night. Kirksey, Wednesday, June 26, at 1 o'clock. Dexter, same date at night. Pottersville, Thursday, June 27 at 1 o'clock. New Concord, Friday, June 28 at 1 o'clock. Hazel, Saturday, June 29, at 1 o'clock. Crossland, same date at night. Could Shout for Joy. "I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart," wrote C. B. Rader, of Lewisburg, W. Va. "for the wonderful double benefit I got from Electric Bitters, in curing me of both a severe case of stomach trouble and of rheumatism, from which I had been an almost sufferer for ten years. It suited my case as though made for me." For dyspepsia, indigestion, jaundice and to rid the system of kidney poisons that cause rheumatism, Electric Bitters have no equal. Try them. Every bottle is guaranteed to satisfy. Only 50c at Dale & Stubblefields. Killed by Cyclone. In Western Missouri a cyclone killed twenty six persons, and in Central Ohio another caused the death of several and inflicted large property damage. At Zanesville a steeple was dashed through the roof of a church and the priest and two others were killed. The third quarterly conference of the West Murray circuit, M. E. Church, South, will be held the 27th and 28th of this month with the Cokes Camp Ground church.	Purveyor Bank Trustee Now Investigating Cashier's Shortage and Will Make Statement. Another chapter has been written in the Farmers Bank affairs of Puryear. Since the bank made an assignment through its president, J. M. Bumpass, turning over the affairs to William E. Gatlin, considerable excitement and uneasiness has been manifested in the north part of Henry county. An expert accountant is busy going over the books, determining the exact condition of the affairs of the bank since the cashier, B. M. Brisendine, disappeared Friday night. A statement made last week, gives the amount of cash in vault at about $1,700 and the deposits in the neighborhood of $30,000. Friends of Brisendine still maintain that he is innocent of intentional wrong doing, although he is criminally liable for accepting deposits when he knew that he was in an insolvent condition, made so by loaning on insufficient or comparatively worthless security. It was announced that the trustee, Mr. Gatlin, will resume business as soon as the investigation into the bank's condition is completed. Al H. Perry.	Mrs. F. E. McReynolds Succumbs at Her Home and the City Mourns the Loss of a Splendid Lady. The whole community was thrown into a state of sadness last Saturday afternoon when the announcement was made that Mrs. F. E. McReynolds, the wife of Prof. McReynolds, of the Murray school, was dead at her home on Institute street. There was no one at home at the time of her death, and the cause of her death is a matter of conjecture, but is believed to have been due to internal hemorrhage. Prof. McReynolds was in Lexington, Ky., taking a special teachers course and was advised regarding his wife's death immediately after her body was found. She was at home alone and at about 11:30 o'clock was in conversation with Mrs. W. G. Johnson regarding the preparation of some food for dinner. She returned to her home and evidently became ill and retired to her room and closed the doors and locked them. After several hours Mrs. Johnson called at the home of the deceased and being unable to arouse any one entered the room and found Mrs. McReynolds cold in death. She gave the alarm and C. M. Hood forced an entrance to the room and immediately summoned a physician. It was found that she had been dead for several hours. Together with her husband Mrs. McReynolds came to Murray less than three years ago, but since coming here endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. She was a lovable woman and her sudden taking away cast a gloom over the entire city. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Christian church, of which she was a devoted member, by Rev. Hawking after which the remains were laid to rest in the City Cemetery. Misses Vera and Hontas Dunn and Miss Verna Robertson left the first of the week for Bowling Green where they will take a special teachers course at the state normal for the next several weeks.	P. H. Porter Last Week Purchased the Franchise to Install Complete Sewerage System for City of Murray. A franchise was last week sold by the city of Murray to Mr. P. H. Porter, of Clinton, Ky., for the installation of a complete sewerage system for the city of Murray. The franchise was advertised for sale the past few weeks and Mr. Porter was the only bidder. He will come here this week and will endeavor to interest local men to engage with him in the undertaking and if successful the work of installing the system will be commenced as early as possible. Since the installation of a system of water works the necessity of a sewerage system is very evident and it is to be hoped that Mr. Porter will find sufficient capital here to associate with him in the work. Dr. Keys Will Enter Infirmary. Dr. Richard Keys, who has been associated with Dr. John Puryear in the practice of medicine here for some time past, has accepted an offer to become associated with the infirmary at Scottsville, Ky., and will leave for that place within a few days. He will go to Murray Saturday for a visit to home folks before taking up his residence in Scottsville. Dr. Keys has proven himself to be a worthy young man and a competent physician, and he leaves many friends here who wish him success in his new situation which comes as a recognition of his professional ability and is a decided promotion. —Mayfield Messenger.	Governor McCreary Names A. J. Burkeen as Magistrate to Succeed the Late W. J. Geurin. J. A. (Sime) Burkeen, who lives a few miles east of Dexter, was last week appointed magistrate of Liberty district to fill the vacancy caused by the death of W. J. Geurin. Mr. Burkeen is one of the best known citizens of the east side and will fill the position with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituency. He has been sworn in and executed the required bond and is now filling the duties of the office. Several good men were applicants for the place and the appointment was not made by the governor for several weeks after the vacancy occurred. Mr. Burkeen has been serving as a member of the county board of education and since receiving the present appointment has tendered his resignation as a member of the board. Famous Stage Beauties Look with Horror on Skin Eruptions, Blotches, Sores or Pimples. They don't have them, nor will any one, who uses Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It glorifies the face. Eczema or Salt Rheum before it. It cures sore lips, chapped hands, chilblains, heels, burns, cuts and bruises. Unrequited for piles. Only 25c at Dale & Stubblefields. Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Downs returned to Murray this afternoon after an extended bridal tour and are now at home to their friends at the home on South Curd street.

No Nomination Yet Made By Republican Convention.

Chicago, June 19.—The Republican National Convention, as constituted on the temporary roll, is determined not to nominate Theodore Roosevelt, is loath to renominate President Taft and would give its eyes and its whiskers for a compromise candidate who could unite the warring chieftains and show enough apparent strength to win in November. These are the conclusions inevitably reached by the non-partisan observer who has sat through the proceedings of the first two days

The most severe windstorm since the storm in September, 1905, swept Louisiana and the Gulf coast, and caused damage that will reach a high figure. Flood nearly every section of the state and the Mississippi coast made reports of heavy losses.

EARNEST APPEAL FOR BETTER SCHOOLS

KENTUCKY EDITORS LISTEN TO INTERESTING ADDRESS.

John B. McFerran Asks Co-Operation in Upbuilding the Rural School of Kentucky.

Olympia Springs, Kentucky, editors heard an earnest appeal for the little children of Kentucky, John B. McFerran, of Louisville, who has been engaged in the work of upbuilding the rural schools of Jefferson county and the state of Kentucky, asked the editors to join hands in a campaign for better schools.

The speaker started his hearers when he declared that within the shadows of the smoke from Louisville's factories there are school buildings which are absolutely unfit for the occupancy of little children.

Among the facts brought out by Mr. McFerran were: That more than two-thirds of the boys of the public schools leave before the end of the eighth grade; that the length of the Kentucky boys' school training is less than six years, and that only one boy in forty enters the first year of high school.

Throughout his remarks, Mr. McFerran was given close attention; and he gave his audience a great fund of information concerning the public schools of the state. When he ceased speaking he was given hearty applause, and he was assured of the cooperation of the country press.

Summer Farm Schools.

The extension department of the College of Agriculture at State University is making arrangements for holding one-week agricultural schools in different parts of the State during the summer months. Specialists will be sent from the college to deliver lectures on the following subjects: Horticulture, dairying, domestic science, poultry, soils and crops, feeding of animals and many other related subjects.

Increase Whisky Output.

Louisville.—That the whisky output of Kentucky will be materially increased because Kentucky is now making much Tennessee whisky formerly produced in Kentucky, is the opinion of H. M. Gilmore, president of the National Malted Barley League.

Prison Contractors Sue.

Frankfort.—Suit has been filed by the Hoge-Montgomery Company, prison contractors, against Harvey S. McCutcheon, J. H. Brown and Finley E. Fogg, members of the old prison commission, to require them to draw a warrant on the state treasury for $70,000, alleged to be due the contractors.

Rebuilt Buggy Plant.

Louisville.—The factory of the Hardy Buggy Company, which was recently destroyed by fire, the loss being $200,000, will be rebuilt at once, according to W. T. Hardy, president of the company.

Paducah Races Called Off.

Paducah.—At a meeting of the directors of the Paducah Fair Association the annual July 4 race meet was declared off, as the directors believed they would not prove profitable. Arrangements will be started at once for the fall fair, which will be held October 2, 3, 4 and 5, inclusive.

ROOSEVELT IN CHICAGO

Makes Characteristic Speech Upon His Arrival in the Convention City.

Declares He Will Not Be Cheated—Police Have to Force Path Through Throng—Taft's Manager Says the Colonel's Coming Is "Last Big Bluff."

Chicago.—At the very moment the national committee was taking the last of the Texas delegates away from him, the more Roosevelt breezed into Chicago, made his way to the Congress hotel through a howling, cheering mob and flung defiance of the bosses from a second-story balcony to a crowd that numbered nearly ten thousand.

His coming was one of the most dramatic incidents of the picture-show cover, little staging had been done. Few preparations had been made. But ten seconds after the colonel alighted from the Lake Shore limited everybody in Chicago appeared that he knew, and converging thousands were blocking every street and avenue within a quarter of a mile of the consul.

In word and in countenance the colonel was for fight. He spoke of his opponents as thieves and said that they were going to lose. He fought with his own powerful arms for a way through the crowd when he got to the hotel. Flashed of face, with the perspiration dripping from his forehead, he ploughed past the jam that blocked the way, grimly declaring that there was but one way to victory and that was the way of battle.

The colonel's arrival had a depressing effect on his enemies, who sulked in their tents and said nothing. His friends were correspondingly elated, and if you listened to and credited the prophecies that are running around the corridors of the Congress tonight you would think that Roosevelt's name is the only one to go before the convention.

Mr. Roosevelt himself, however, has no such delusions. He knows that there is a fight against him, and he has assured his friends that he is ready for the hardest and the bitterest struggle of his career.

After Mr. Roosevelt had been virtually catapulted into the elevator and up to his quarters on the political floor of the Congress the crowd that had been stopped by the police outside began to yell for him.

He sat down for a brief instant, shook hands with a few of his followers who had managed to find their way in, and then, putting on his new slouch hat, rushed into the hallway, into another room and out upon the balcony.

A wild yell greeted him as he appeared and he instantly seized his hat and yelled it frantically at the crowd, "Hello, my friends! Make the big talk!"

"Tell us what you are going to do to them," shouted somebody else. "Without waiting to be introduced, the colonel began."

"This is a bad place to steal anything from," he shouted at Roosevelt.

"From us, you mean," replied the colonel, and again the crowd broke into a howl of delight.

Just about that time a bunch of California delegates pulled up at the avenue, bearing in their center a banner, which read: "California will not submit to a trial of stolen property case by the thieves."

The colonel looked at the banner and grins. "I got California's twenty-six votes, and it is my intention that they shall be counted," he shouted. "This has come down to simply a naked fight of honesty against dishonesty; of honesty against thieves."

"The people have spoken and the politicians must be sworn to answer. They will be made to understand that they are the servants of the rank and file of the plain citizens of the republic."

"This is no farcical fight," he continued, when the crowd showed a readiness to listen once more. "It is a contest between the people themselves and the politicians representing all that is worst in corrupt politics and business, and the people soon will be able to destroy corrupt politicians and to conduct their business for themselves."

"We had with us in the primaries," "Illinois," yelled a Chicagoan from the rear ranks.

"No, Illinois," said the colonel, showing his teeth. "We had Illinois' fifty-six votes, and we have had those of every state where the people have expressed their will at the primaries."

"In those states we have beat them from 5 to 1 to 8 to 1. The people are more strongly with us now than they were at those times, and they will refuse to submit to any robbery now."

"It is a naked fight against theft, and theft will not win."

There was another prolonged cry of approval, and the colonel, bowing and swinging his hat through the air, backed out and went to his rooms with the leaders who have taken charge of him. It was no easy task to get back.

In the corridor just outside the door through which he had passed to gain access to the balcony were fully a thousand people.

Chicago.—After the executive committee had finished its work, Director McKinley gave out a table, claiming a total of 500 delegates for Taft, 50 more than enough necessary for his nomination, and conceding only 442 to Roosevelt.

The McKinley table gave Taft 83 of New York's delegates, but at the very moment when he was giving it out the New York delegation was in caucus and New York Governor Timothy

HARD FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

It's hard enough to keep house if it is perfect health, but a woman weak, tired and suffering with an aching back has a heavy burden. Any woman in this condition has cause to suspect kidney trouble, especially if the kidney action is even a little deranged.

Donna's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. It is the best recommended special kidney remedy.

Mrs. C. F. Maco, Madison St., Shawneetown, Ill., says: "I suffered intensely from backache and headache and was very nervous. I was scarcely able to attend to my household work and at times was so bad I was confined to bed. Donna's Kidney Pills gave me quick relief and before long cured me completely."

"When Your Back Is Lame, Remember the Name—DONNA'S." See all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Remedy.

"See how it is still going up." "Then the best way to stop that is to keep it from going down."

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

Doctors Could Not Help Mrs. Templeton—Regained Health through Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Hooper, Nebraska.—"I am very glad to tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me. For five years I suffered from female troubles so I was scarcely able to do my work. I took doctors' medicines and used local treatments but was not helped. I had such a awful bearing down pains and my back was so weak I could hardly walk and could not ride. I often had to sit up nights to sleep and my friends thought I could not live long. At my request my husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I commenced to take it. By the time I had taken the seventh bottle my health had returned and I began doing my washing and was a well woman. At one time for three weeks I did all the work for eighteen boarders with no signs of my old trouble returning. Many have taken your medicine after seeing what it did for me. I would not take $1000 and be where I was. I have my permission to use my name if it will aid anyone."—Mrs. SUSIE TEMPLETON, Hooper, Nebraska.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair.

It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

The doctors said he'd have to lose his leg.

That is what they told Mr. Joseph Braaw Jr., of Raleigh, N. C. They said that was the only way to save his life.

"I suffered over four years with a sore leg from a horse bite," he writes in a letter to The Blood Balm Co. "I tried every remedy I could find. My leg was so swollen that I had to get up on my hands and knees to get it left better. And now my leg has all healed up. And I am in perfect health."

And Mr. Braaw's case is only one of thousands where this purifying and wonder-working remedy has completely healed those deep-seated sores and ulcers which yield to no other treatment.

Your money back if it fails to help you.

If the druggist can't supply you, write to The Blood Balm Co., Philadelphia or St. Louis. Don't be discouraged.

SERIAL STORY

No Man's Land

A ROMANCE

By Louis Joseph Vance

Illustrations by Ray Walters

(Copyright, 1914, by Louis Joseph Vance.)

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he doubts the propriety of his being there, for both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tyl dead. Coast struggles to win the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he loses his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land.

"Cleaning my pipe. Go on—and sleep. Your time's not up yet."

"What's o'clock?"

Appleyard mumbled something incoherent as he stepped out on deck; and Coast turned over and slept again.

It seemed hours later when he found himself abruptly wide awake, in a tremor of panic anxiety bred of a fancy that a human voice had cried out in mortal terror, somewhere within his hearing. He started up, informed by that sixth sense we call intuition that conditions around the Echo had changed radically since the last time he had fallen asleep; and it seemed no more than a second from the moment his eyes opened until he found himself in the cockpit, gazing dazedly into the inscrutable heart of the fog.

At first, in his confusion, he could see nothing amiss. The Echo was riding on a quiet tide and an even keel, with scarcely any perceptible motion. The encompassing darkness was intense, unfathomable, profound; only the forward light showed a dim halo of yellow opalescence near the mast-head, and the faint glow from the cabin lamp quivered on slowly swirling convolutions of dense white vapor, like smoke. The port and starboard lights had been extinguished, as they should be when a vessel comes to anchor.

What, then, had interrupted his slumbers?

He turned with a question shying on his lips.

Appleyard was nowhere visible. Coast required some minutes before he was convinced of the fact of the little man's disappearance. But the cabin proved as empty as the cockpit, and the tender was gone.

The cabin chronometer chimed the hour of four in the morning.

As the echoes died, as though they had evoked the genius of that place, a strange and sense upon the water, a sound, sounding shrill across the waters, yet as if coming from a great distance.

CHAPTER VIII.

Some moments elapsed. Coast's every nerve and sense upon the water, a sound, sounding shrill across the waters, yet as if coming from a great distance.

And yet.

Appleyard? What of him? Was there any connection to be traced between his mysterious disappearance from the Echo and that weird, unearthly scream? Was there any link near, and had the little man found it only to become the victim of some frightful, nameless peril? Could that have been his voice, calling for help?

And in what dread extremity?

There was nothing he could do, no way to reach the man. The tender was gone, the shore invisible and who should say how far distant? Otherwise he would not have hesitated to swim for it.

Presently it occurred to him to wonder where the Echo lay off what land. Appleyard's responses to his inquiries several hours back, returned in memory. The name, No Man's Land, intrigued. He interrupted his vigil to investigate such sources of information as he had at hand.

In the cabin again, with the lamp turned high, he dragged out a chart—number 112 of the admirable series published by the Coast and Geodetic survey, delineating with wonderful accuracy the hydrography of Buzzard's Bay and Vineyard and Nantucket Sounds, together with the topography of the littoral and islands.

With pencil it was easy to trace the Echo's course from New Bedford harbor through Quick's Hole, a little to the east of which, say of Robinson's Hole, the fog had overtaken them. To the south and east of that point lay Martha's Vineyard, for all the world like a trusted fowl in profile. And there—yes, due south of Gay Head—was No Man's Land, its contour much that of an infant's shoe, the heel digging into the Atlantic. Comparison with the scale demonstrated it to be roughly a mile and five-eighths long by a mile wide—extreme measurements.

Coast stared at it with renewed interest, for the first time convinced of the existence of a spot so oddly named. A number of black dots along its northern shore seemed to indicate buildings—but Appleyard had distinctly said "uninhabited."

Coast turned out the lamp and went back to the deck.

There was nothing to be seen, nothing to do.

He edged.

Then out of the confusion of his temper, in which enmity stalked in singular companionship with perturbation, he glanced upon an odd end of thought, one of those stray bits of information, mostly culled from desultory reading, that clutter the back of every man's brain.

He happened to remember hearing, some time, some where, that fog rarely clings to the surface of moving water; that, by putting one's vision upon a plane almost horizontal with the water, it is ordinarily possible to see for some distance roundabout.

There may be something in it.

No harm to try.

Forthwith he scrambled out upon the stern, from which, after some intricate maneuvering and by dint of considerable physical ingenuity, he managed to suspend himself, at peril of a ducking, with his head near the water.

He was promptly justified of his pains; the theory proved itself—in that one instance at least, between the slowly undulant floor, glassy and colorless, and the ragged fringe of the mist curtain, he discovered a definite space.

Directly astern and, roughly, some forty feet away, a shelving stretch of pebbly beach, softly lapped by low-voiced ripples, shut in the view. The Echo's tender, drawn up beyond the water's edge, bisected it.

"Good," said Coast, abstracted, "covering from his constrained position."

Curiosity gripped him strongly, caution contending vainly, he knew quite well that he would never bide content until he had probed for the cause and source and solved the mystery of that weird cry in the night just gone.

Moreover, he felt in a measure responsible for Appleyard. Surely there must be some strange reason for his protracted absence.

Abandoning himself, deaf to the counsels of prudence, Coast rose and stripped off his clothing.

He let himself gently into the water, fearing to dive because he did not know its depth, and found it warm—warmer than the air. He struck out cautiously, using the slow, old-fashioned but silent breast stroke. In two minutes, however, he was wading up to the beach.

There was no sign of Appleyard; only the tender. Upon that stern strown shore the foot of the run-away had left no trail. Though Coast cast about in a wide radius, he found no sign of the missing man. The pebbles scratched and bruised his unprotected feet, and he began to shiver with cold. He gave it up presently, returned to the tender, pushed out and sculled out to the Echo.

Then, having rubbed his flesh to a bluish with a coarse towel, he dressed, took the small boat back to the beach, drew it up and, now fully committed to an enterprise the folly of which he stubbornly refused to debate, set off to reconnoiter along the water's edge, feeling his way.

After a time the beach grew more sandy, and emboldened by the knowledge that he would have his foot-prints to guide him back, he left the water and struck inland—but only to find his progress in that direction checked by a steep wall of earth, a stiff-like bluff of height indeterminate, its flanks wave-eaten and deeply scarred by rain.

At random, with no design, he turned again to his left and proceeded as before, but now along the foot of the bluff, trailing heavily through damp, yielding sand.

He must have tramped, at a rude guess, several hundred yards before he discovered either a break in the bluff or any change in the general configuration of the shore. Ultimately, however, the one fell away inland and the other widened.

A moment later he came upon a small catboat careened above high tide mark, with a gaping wound in its starboard side, forward and below the waterline.

She lay stern to the water. Taking the point of her stem as his guide, Coast turned inland again, on a line as straight as possible considering the slanting lay of the land and the impossibility of seeing anything beyond a radius of a few feet.

He had not gone far upon this tack before he stumbled upon a path of hard-packed earth, obviously made by human feet. Then he found himself mounting a rather steep grade, and in another moment was face to face with a plain weather-boarded wall of a wooden building.

There were no windows that he could discover on this side, and though he listened keenly he heard no sounds from within.

Other buildings presented themselves successively, as like as peas to one another and to the first he encountered. All peopled exclusively by the seven howling devils of desolation and their attendant court of rats—or so he surmised from sundry sounds of scurrying and squeaks.

He gathered that he was threading a rude sort of street, fringed on one side—to seaward—with the abandoned dwellings of what had apparently been a small fishing community.

"No Man's Land indeed!" he commented. "Certainly lives up to his name, even if it's some place else. It begins to look like it."

But Appleyard?

He was moved vaguely to liken the place to the Cold Lairs of the Jungle Books. "Only infinitely sordid," he mused, at pause, "lacking the majesty and the horror." Wonder had he better go back?

As he hung in the wind, debating what to do, whether to press on or to be sensible, swayed this way and that by doubts and half-formed impulses, somewhere near, seemingly at his very elbow, certainly not twenty feet away, suddenly a dog howled. Long drawn, lugubrious with a note of lamentation, the sound struck discordant upon his overtaken senses, shocking him (before he knew it) to unspoken protest.

"Good God!" he cried, aloud.

"What?"

INTERESTS VISITORS TO WASHINGTON

AMONG the thousands of visitors to Washington, those who are posted always look with great interest at the bronze six-pounder cannon which stands at the right of the main entrance to the war department. Recently workmen have changed the name plate on it to correct an error of long standing. This gun was the first one captured from the British in the Revolutionary war and was taken by Benedict Arnold. It was cast in Holland for King George of England in 1747.

NOTED OLD RANCHES

San Joaquin Valley Acres Now in Business Hands.

Tejon Ranches, With More Than 276,000 Acres of Land, Constitutes One of the Very Few Great Tracts Left.

Los Angeles, Cal.—One by one the great ranches of old California, the immense grants of early days, the lordly domains of wheat and barley magnates, have melted away before the relentless sweep of progress. For half a century and more the change has been going on, the passing of each vast rancho marking a swift epoch in the history of some section of the state. The subdivision of the first great rancho in California may be said to have marked the passing of a feudalism of the soil in this western world, for the old California was in truth almost a land of overlords, and even supported something like a peasantry population all its own. And yet something may be justly said in defense of the pioneers, both Spanish and American, and of the pastoral system of that early day. There was then known no such thing as the system of small farms and comparatively dense agricultural settlements which marked, and now more than ever mark, the east and central west. In California land had to be acquired, if acquired at all, in immense tracts.

Between Los Angeles and San Francisco, here and there in the mighty reaches of the San Joaquin valley and interspersed like exaggerated white squares on the curious checkerboard whose black squares, representing acres of something that per chance may be called "intensity," agricultural development, greatly predominate, may still be found a few of the oldest ranches of old days. Most of them, it is true, are more or less under the sway of the surveyor's rod and the modern idea, but a few (you can count them on one hand) are almost as they were a half century ago.

Such a place is the great tract now known as the "Tejon Ranches," the original Gen. Beale rancho, which lies well at the bottom of the San Joaquin valley, in the glow formed by the Sierra Nevada and the Coast range. The recent sale of this vast pastoral empire to a group of Los Angeles land buyers makes the sensation of the year in California real estate circles.

Forty years ago, in his interesting volume, "California, a Book for Travelers and Settlers," Charles Nordhoff declared the Tejon to be the most magnificent estate in a single hand in America. And Mr. Nordhoff, who was the correspondent of the New York Herald, had traversed continents in the service of his paper.

The Tejon Ranches, with their more than 276,000 acres of land, constitute one of the very few great tracts of the old days which has not through all the years lost a whit of its identity. Today this landed empire, now, as for nearly half a century past, an undivided principality, is in essentially the same condition in which it was when Mr. Nordhoff visited the spot as the friend and guest of its owner, Gen. Edward F. Beale.

Boasting an incalculable wealth of undeveloped agricultural and horticultural possibilities, together with certain, though unestimated, mineral and timber resources, the enormous holding has remained during all the intervening years what it originally was, a live stock rancho. With a fine sentiment that has taken small reckoning of financial exploitation, the heirs of the late Gen. Beale have clung steadily to the old regime in their management of the great estate.

The name of Gen. Beale, scholar, warrior, gentleman—the companion of Kit Carson in the lively days of the southwest, and the greatest of all the survivors of transcontinental roads—is indissolubly linked with the his-

Social Side of the Journey

Attitude of the Captain of Modern Ocean Liners Toward Passengers Entrusted to His Care.

New York—Ever since the Titanic disaster there has been much discussion relative to the extent to which the officers of a big liner mingle socially with the passengers. The statement has been made that many captains of big ships nowadays pay a great deal of attention to the social side of a voyage and spend a great deal of time promiscuously with passengers or chatting with them in the lounge or the smoking room when their attention ought to be devoted to the ship.

Persons who have been crossing the ocean ever since the days of the steamship have called a "leviathan" ship the amount of general sociability on a ship has steadily diminished with the increase in the size of vessels. In the days when there were three long tables in the dining saloon, with the captain presiding over the middle one, the purser at the head of another and the doctor commanding the third, the captain frequently knew everybody by name. Anyhow, everybody knew the captain and said "Good morning" to him, for in those days everybody in the first cabin got to know everybody else.

When marine architects began superimposing deck upon deck, and the first cabin accommodation of a ship stretched to 200 and 300, and then to 500, and accommodations became so luxurious that one could pay $1,000 or more for a trip across the Atlantic—the figure has now grown to something like $5,000—it became impracticable to know everybody. In a ship of the size of a modern liner there are now so many places where a passenger may go other than his stateroom that it is impossible for the captain to know everybody, and he can no longer do so. On the Titanic he could have had even a private promenade deck all to himself. On the Olympic you have the choice of four decks for your stroll and if anybody is looking for you he may have to visit the main dining room, the restaurant, the tearoom, the eximium the two open air cafes, and the big companionways on the various decks before he finds you. There was a time when besides the one promenade deck one had to go only to the smoking room or the dining room or perhaps the writing room to find some one else.

One result of the increased size of the ship and of her passenger list is that nowadays you can cross the ocean without making a single acquaintance, and there are really good who consider this an advantage.

Business Chances

Must Have Distinct Service
Value to Public

By GRHAM WOOD

SOME of the brainiest business men in America assure us that the human element is entering more and more into the business affairs of the world. They tell us that the days of cutthroat competition are already gone, and that they will never return; that the question of service value is obtruding itself so persistently that it is impossible that it should much longer be disregarded.

It is not necessary that one should be a very close student in order to find positive evidence that such a change is taking place. In a word, we are getting to the point where we are willing to assert with all the force of public opinion that the old rule, "Enough is enough," applies to one class of people quite as much as to another.

Ten or fifteen years ago men ran their business affairs as if the general public had no rights in the matter. The sole inspiration for business was the accumulation of earnings from which to declare dividends, and any apparent desire on the part of the people to penetrate beneath the surface of things was promptly checkmated. "The public be damned!" was the rule in many offices that had nothing to do with railway management.

Today there is still a certain amount of this spirit, but it is rapidly being eliminated. The judicial and legislative investigations of big business enterprises have shown man that he cannot ride roughshod over his fellows forever. As a result, the better days are already dawning. As George W. Perkins suggests, the time has come when the "only kind of a trust that can live is one that makes money for its stockholders by manufacturing a commodity that the people need for a less price than they were able to get it for before."

This is but another way of saying that service value is beginning to be an important factor in the commercial world, and, fortunately, the term "service value" does not apply to one class alone. It is not sufficient that a business should be of value to its owners. It must also have a distinct service value to the community, or it is destined to go into the discard.

Growth of Snobbery in This Country

By CHARLES JAMES New York

Those of us who are of Anglo-Saxon origin or descent are pretty sure to be snobs, whatever we may think. But we cannot help it; it is in the blood.

There is nothing strikes an Englishman or American traveling in Latin countries more than the easy familiarity which exists among the people. It is true there is class distinction, but this does not make for haughtiness on the one hand or servility on the other. This was also the case among the Gaelic peoples until they fell under the influence of the Anglo-Saxon, or probably it would be more correct to say the Anglo-Norman. This man with his hard feudalistic spirit, knowing nothing of or caring nothing for sympathy, much less brotherhood, as between man and man, believing only in conquest and dominion, upon him the fumes of snobbery grew apace.

Every one of us today who humiliates a man because he is poor or insignificant or toadies to another because he is rich or powerful is imitating the Anglo-Norman.

Beyond any question of doubt snobbery is a large and flourishing growth in this country. But it is somewhat differentiated from the English species. There in general "blood" is the object of worship; here it is more apt to be money. We have, it is true, our devotees of "blood," too, but they are not quite sure of themselves.

Of course there are many degrees of snobbery and it is to be found in the kitchen as well as in the parlor.

How to eradicate it? Ah, I wish I could tell. I fear satire will never do it. For do we not know that Thackeray's great work, "The Book of Snobs," was written in vain?

Long Law Courses are Urged

By L. N. BLUMENTHAL

There has recently been much discussion in regard to prolonging the preliminary courses of study for the various professions, notably the legal vocation.

Brilliant paragraphs have been penned by distinguished attorneys. These writers must have undoubtedly admired their theories; but how many have attentively considered the injustice these sentiments would cause if executed?

Elaborate schedules have been proposed, suggesting so many hours for lectures, so many hours for study and so forth, but naught has been said about the poor student who is forced to spend his few hours of recreation laboriously and zealously accumulating a knowledge of the finer technicalities of law.

What about them?

If this theory were put in practice it would with one bold stroke obliterate opportunity and ambition.

Attorneys who have attended night school should consider the struggling student and remember all they themselves have endured.

Let us all bear in mind that talent may be stimulated by study, but it cannot be manufactured.

School System Stifles Minds of Young

ECZEMA DISFIGURED BABY

"Our little boy Gilbert was troubled with eczema when but a few weeks old. His little face was covered with sores even to back of his ears. The poor little fellow suffered very much. The sores began as pimples, his little face was disfigured very much. We hardly knew what he looked like. The face looked like raw meat. We tied little bags of cloth over his hands to prevent him from scratching. He was very restless at night, his little face itched."

"We consulted two doctors at Chicago, where we resided at that time. After trying all the medicine of the two doctors without any result, we read of the Cuticura Remedies, and at once bought Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Following the directions carefully and promptly we saw the result, and after four weeks, the dear child's face was as fine and clean as any little baby's face. Every one who saw Gilbert after using the Cuticura Remedies was surprised. He has a head of hair which is a pride for any boy of his age, three years. We can only recommend the Cuticura Remedies to everybody." (Signed) Mrs. H. Albrecht, Box 833, West Point, Neb., Oct. 26, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Nature Faker.

The Chief Requisite.

David Hefasco, in an interview in New York, condemned a certain ultra-modern type of society woman.

"This type, which luckily isn't numerous," he said, "lives on notoriety. To a woman of this type a lawyer said one day:

"Yes, madam, I can get you the divorce you desire. For $500 I can get you a divorce—and get it without publicity, too."

"She wrinkled her smooth, white, well-powdered forehead in a frown; she bit her rouged and overred lips in annoyance.

"But what would it cost," she asked, "with publicity?"

Going Further Back.

A man who had suddenly become very rich went to live in New York and began to spend money with a lavish hand. He decided that his name needed advertising, so he visited a genealogist.

"I suppose," he said, "if I pay you enough you can trace my family back to Adam."

"My dear sir," replied the genealogist, "if you're willing to put up the money we can prove by evolution that your family existed before Adam."—Lippincott's Magazine.

BRYAN.

Sixteen years ago he leaped into national prominence with a speech which carried the deep insurgency of the hour. He led, not once but twice, to glorious defeat. Each time he was followed by the minds, the hearts and the votes of millions of his countrymen.

Today he is but 53, which is nearly noontide in the day of intellect, of politics, of statecraft.

It is marvelous that a man who leads only to defeat could retain his hold upon the minds and the imagination of men over so long a period. The explanation lies neither in his eloquence nor his political principles, whatever may be said of the quality of the one or the soundness of the other. The explanation of Bryan is character—integrity, sincerity, fidelity, courage.

True moral grandeur is so rare, especially among politicians, that the world takes off its hat to it whenever it appears. —Memphis Press.

Beware of Ointment for Catarrh That Contains Mercury.

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from a reputable physician, as the damage they will do is incalculable. To the good you can possibly derive from them, Halls Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Halls Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

County Attorney Clay Erwin left the latter part of the past week for Chicago where he attended the national republican convention. Just how much Clay assisted in making the nomination is not reported in any of the Chicago papers, but we will await his return and then we are sure to be enlightened on the matter.

The rains of the past week have been worth thousands of dollars to growing crops of Calhoun county. Farmers have been able to finish tobacco setting, re-planting, etc., and corn has shot from the ground like magic. The Ledger only sees one danger, and while we are not thoroughly informed, are of the opinion that the corn crop has been neglected and that the average of tobacco is greater than the county ever saw.

Rev. W. A. Russell was called to Dyer, Tenn., this week on account of the serious illness of his father. On account of his extreme age fears are entertained that he will not recover. Rev. Russell will also visit Jackson, Tenn., where he will officiate at the marriage of a nephew who is absent.
